Ultimately, the answer would be yes.

As of today, no. As already disclosed, this is a defunct dba. They could go back to Carlsbad and go through the trouble and expense of re-opening a bank account they closed, hoping the bank still had the dba statement and records.

MAS, by the way, is an acronym for Marita and Arthur Springer. This was their old dba, they are still married, living together. There was no corporation involved here, this is their money.

The above is typical of 99.9% of all the defunct dba applications you and all other courts receive from all locators over the years.
